ABSTRACT:

Today, improving the position of women in society has become more urgent than ever. The position of women in society is directly related to their position in the family. Family is a homeland within a homeland. When a person is born, his first ideas about life are formed precisely in the family. In this regard, the attitude towards women in families is of great importance.

Keywords: Family, social activism, women, practical work.

INTRODUCTION

We often emphasize that youth are the creators of the future, the owners of our future. Our children, whom we hope to see as our future, are mainly raised by mothers, and the role of these mothers in society and their dignity in the family cannot but affect the kind of person they become. Only a child who is well-educated in the family will grow up to be a useful and perfect person for society. Therefore, family education and the appreciation of women are important factors in the development of society. Alisher Navoi's "Hayrat ul-abror", Yusuf Khos Khojib's "Kutadgu bilig", and Kaykovus's "Kobusnoma" talk about family life and the important importance of the family.

RESULTS

Today, there are those who consider gender equality a crisis for Uzbek families. Gender equality does not claim the superiority of women over men. On the contrary, it promotes the equal rights of women as individuals. We promote only those aspects that are consistent with our mentality in Uzbek society. The attitude towards women in Uzbek families should be based on national and universal values. Our national and universal values, which have been passed down from generation to generation for centuries, encourage people to have pure human feelings such as patience, respect for elders, honor for younger people, tolerance, humanity, hard work, kindness, and loyalty. Value is an arabic word that is used to indicate the universal, socio-moral, cultural-spiritual significance of certain phenomena. All things that are important for a person and humanity, such as freedom, equality, enlightenment, truth, goodness, beauty, material and spiritual wealth, traditions and customs, are considered values^[1]. The main root of the problems that arise in families today is precisely the lack of formation of our national and universal values. Although our state supports women in every way, both materially and spiritually, family problems are causing obstacles to women's education in some families. Such problems are increasing and are also leading to the collapse of the so-called family fortress. Family breakups have always had a negative impact on the development of the country. If we educate students from school as family-oriented people, we will further increase the positive effect of the educational process. Only then, in the loving and trusting embrace of their parents, a mature, harmonious generation will grow up in families that will benefit our society. It is not for nothing that our wise people say, "Where there is one day of war, there is forty days of blessing." Since ancient times, our people have resolved family disagreements not through war and conflict, but through peace and reconciliation.

The Scientific and Practical Research Center "Family" plays an important role in increasing the position of women in society in Uzbekistan. This center was established in accordance with the Presidential Decree of February 2, 2018[2] and conducts scientific research on family and women's issues, thereby contributing to increasing the social activity of women and strengthening their position in society. The mission of this center is to ensure the effective implementation of state policy to support women, protect their rights and legitimate interests, and prepare analytical materials and scientifically based recommendations to increase their social activity; to identify women's problems in a timely manner, and to develop analytical materials and scientifically based recommendations to improve the system of providing socio-legal, psychological and material assistance to women in need and in difficult social situations, including women with disabilities. Also, in 2022, the "Family and Women" Research Institute was established on the basis of the "Family" Center[3]. This institute also conducts scientific research on improving the position of women in society, protecting their rights and interests. In general, the "Family" Scientific and Practical Research Center and the "Family and Women" Research Institute are carrying out important scientific and practical work to improve the position of women in society, protect their rights and interests, and strengthen the institution of the family, and are developing proposals to improve the regulatory and legal framework on women's issues.

The formation of national and universal values is of great importance in solving the above problems. For this, an integrative approach to the formation of national and universal values in family education, that is, a collaborative and targeted approach, will give effective results. In order to popularize the life experience of exemplary families, create a healthy socio-spiritual environment in society, it is necessary to hold competitions such as "Promoter of Values" in neighborhoods, attract more families to the "Young Book Reader Family" competitions, and improve cooperation between neighborhoods and schools to prevent early marriage. New Uzbekistan has become a field of large-scale reforms. Regardless of the area in which the reforms are being carried out, the goal of the reforms is the development and progress of our state. In particular, great attention is paid to the system of further improving the institution of the family. Ensuring the strength of families is being considered at the level of state policy. The establishment of the Scientific and Practical Research Institute "Neighborhood and Family" under the Ministry of Support of the Mahalla and Family of the Republic of Uzbekistan is also a vivid evidence of the reforms being carried out in the system. The Scientific and Practical Research Institute "Neighborhood and Family" was tasked with developing methodological recommendations related to strengthening spiritual and moral values in families based on the analysis of universal and national family values, advanced foreign experience[4]. Attention was also paid to the education system in strengthening family upbringing and forming national and universal values. In addition to establishing cooperation between school and family in the educational process, texts were also included about the fact that girls should be educated, that respecting women is a part of oriental upbringing, and that our women, who have become role models in society with their work and talent and have been awarded the high titles of "Heroes of Uzbekistan" for their contribution to the prosperity of the homeland. Women can experience true happiness with their families, despite their success in their careers. Research shows that, from a relationship perspective, the embeddedness of the family allows entrepreneurs to maximize capital resources through family resources, which speeds up the process, encourages knowledge sharing, and builds trust[5]. Family support and women's new ideas contribute to the development of society as a whole and bring great benefits.

CONCLUSIONS

The family is an important foundation for improving the position of women in society. Because the values, upbringing and support formed in the family directly affect the position of women in society. The following are the main aspects in this regard:

Education and development: If a woman is supported in the family to gain knowledge and work on herself, she will have the opportunity to actively participate in society. Educated and qualified women will find their place in the economy, politics and other areas.

Confidence and spiritual support: Family love and trust increase a woman's self-confidence. Constant encouragement from her husband, children and other family members will motivate her to be active in the external environment.

Balancing traditional and modern roles: The family should help a woman to harmoniously carry out traditional and modern roles. For example, it is possible to balance being a housewife with learning a profession and engaging in social activities.

Model role in raising children: A woman, depending on her position in society, becomes an example for her children. If she is educated, active and independent, the future generation will grow up to be like that.

Support from men in the family: If a father or husband correctly approaches a woman's professional and creative activities, conditions are created for her to move freely in society.

In conclusion, the strength and culture of the family determine the place of women in society. If the family supports the development of women, society will also benefit and its development will increase.
